Chapter 1 by Draeve

The creature, it wasn't unheard of. It's told in all religions and cultures, all legends around the world. Whether it's based on other species or creatures, it always appear nonetheless, in the stories.

The dragon, they called him, they called it.

Dragon:

A mythical monster like a giant reptile. In European tradition the dragon is typically fire-breathing and tends to symbolize chaos or evil, whereas in East Asia it is usually a beneficent symbol of fertility, associated with water and the heavens.

They had even defined it on, what. What was it called.... Goggle? Golge? Gugol? Gugle? Hmmm.... Google? Ah, that was it. It was called Google.

However, as much as they tried, they cannot merely DEFINE such a creature like him. A creature that has survived through the ages, the creature who has seen the rise and fall of many empires and wars.

You see, in the past, all the creatures lived, they were alive, they roamed the planet, they roamed and lived amongst their children, the dinosaurs.

At first, it was just the dragons, but soon, some of them retreated to the water, thus adapting to the water dragons, then, the fish-dinosaurs. Nessie, or, her full name, Loch Ness, the humans found her home, Lake Loch Ness. Which they named after the fish-dinosaur that lives beneath the surface of water.

At first, Nessie was fine, she joked and teased everyone, but then, she started kicking everyone out of her life. Then, she retreated to her own lake, becoming a shadow of what she originally was. None of the dragons or dinosaurs knew what or why she did that.

Now, at least she's calmed down. Not attacking anyone, though scaring and exciting the tourists.

But, enough of that for now. The dinosaurs and dragons lived together, not minding each other, and lived together enough that it could be considered harmony. Yet, as always, a disaster always occurs when something good finally happens.

The meteor.

Every remaining and alive dragons remembered and knew of the meteor. At first, the dragons felt like something was going to attack them from the sky, but brushed it off. A few moments later, that feeling grew more dreadful. Realizing that something indeed was going to happen, the dragons warned the dinosaurs and fish-dinosaurs frantically.

BAB0000000000000000000000000000000M!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

It was silence, then flickers, wait, no. It wasn't flickerings, but full-out fires, and a giant crater where the meteor struck. Instantly, the dinosaurs and dragons that didn't make it out in time, they were obliterated.

Only a few escaped, and because of the horrible smoke that was going to stay in the air for at legends of the dragons.

And now, the dragon population shall finally come out. Out of the shadows, they will survive, and it won't be easy.

Chapter 2 by Florenceia

The wind filled my powerful wings like sails on a boat. I soared above the world, the first time in thousands, no millions of years. The shimmering white of the clouds sparkled against my crimson scales. Dust older than anything still on this world fell of my wings and talons. I was soaring over mountains now. White with snow they glistened in the early sun. Flying westward I would soon be flying over New Delhi, but not aware of the existence of humans I flew on towards the new world.
